Tulane University
New Orleans, Louisiana

Instructor; Spring Semester, 2004. Taught “History 333: Modern Britain”. Upper-division lecture and discussion class. In addition to core textbooks, students read five contemporary writings; around which I developed intensive in-class discussions, challenging students with questions and eliciting a “hands-on” analysis to connect the readings with the broader themes of British History.

Louisiana State University
Baton Rouge, Louisiana

Instructor; Fall and Spring Semester, 2003-2004. Taught two sections of “History 1003: Western Civilization from 1500 to the Present.” I assigned three primary source readings in addition to the required Western Civilization textbook as the basis for class discussions; which enlightened students to the broader themes of European History under study.

St. Philips College
San Antonio, Texas

Instructor; Spring Semester, 2003. Taught three sections of “History 1301: American History through the Civil War. In addition to the required textbook, I used relevant primary sources to initiate class discussions among this very diverse student body. These discussions connected contemporary documents to the period under study and linked historical information to students’ present concerns.

Louisiana State University
Baton Rouge, Louisiana

Teaching Assistant; Fall Semester, 2003. Graded for “History 2057: American History from 1865 to the Present.”

Teaching Assistant, August 1999 through May 2001. For three semesters, graded for “History 1003: Western Civilization Since 1500.” One semester, graded for “History 2055: American History to the Civil War.”
